

Ben Davis University High School named Four Star School

The Indiana Department of Education has chosen Ben Davis University High School as a Four Star School for performing in the upper 25th percentile of schools in three ISTEP-based categories. The award is for achievements in the 2012-13 school year.

BDU is the early-college high school in the MSD of Wayne Township. Students attending the school have the opportunity to earn not only their high school diploma, but a two-year associate's degree through Vincennes University as well. The vast majority of students at the school receive both their high school diplomas and college degrees. The school has had a 100-percent graduation rate for four years in a row.

Audrey Lane's daughter Zavia Jones is a junior at BDU.

"The environment at BDU is really different from other schools because the staff — from counselors to teachers to administrators — are easily accessible and don't just say they want to help, but are truly there to support my child," says Lane.
