Lynhurst students learn building trades skills during summer project

They're not even in high school yet, but they're learning skills of a trade that desperately needs workers.

Student from Lynhurst 7th & 8th Grade Center spent a week in June getting hands-on experience in the building trades. Area 31 Career Center teacher Doug Sisk and others guided them through the renovation of Lynhurst's concession stand.

There are only 30 carpenters to replace every 100 who retire this year. Efforts such as this most definitely help our students, and could help an entire industry as well.
